Response to Arguments

Applicant's arguments have been fully considered but they are not deemed to be persuasive.

Applicant argues that the basis is found at page 9. However, the material cited pertains exclusively to administration 10-13 days after birth. The claim as written is devoid of this limitation. Please see Gentry Gallery v. Berkline 45 U.S.P.Q.2d 1498 for a discussion related to broadening the claimed invention without support in the as-filed specification. Please see PurduePharma v. Faulding 56 U.S.P.Q.2d 1481 for a discussion related to a failure to describe a claimed generic concept in the narrative portion of the specification, but rather basing support on limitations in examples.

In addition, applicant's definition of "effective amount" being an amount that achieves the stated objectives does not provide sufficient guidance to one of ordinary skill in the art about the amount intended. In response to Applicant's argument that "therapeutically effective amount" should be "read in the context of the present invention", applicant misinterprets the principle that claims are interpreted in the light of the specification. Although these elements ("therapeutically effective amounts") are found as examples or embodiments in the specification, they were not claimed explicitly. Nor were the words that are used in the claims defined in the specification to require these limitations. A reading of the specification provides no evidence to indicate that these limitations must be imported into the claims to give meaning to disputed terms.

Applicant's discuss "prevention" in the context of newborn animals. However, the invention as claimed is directed to "ruminants". Counsel's bald argument that "treatment of a disease also comprises prevention of said disease" because the comparable of identical dosages of the active agent are given, has not been substantiated with appropriate evidence. Is counsel alleging that "preventing" and "treating" are synonyms? If so, the claim language is redundant.

Art Unit: 1651

The arguments by counsel in this regard have not been substantiated with appropriate evidence. It is well settled that arguments by counsel do not constitute evidence.

In any event, administration of the same strain as taught by the references, regardless of the mode of administration and of the differences between fungi and bacteria, would naturally "prevent" fungal disease from occurring, particularly in the absence of evidence to the contrary.

Therefore the rejections are deemed proper and are adhered to.
